Back to Christmas business

Christmas market reopens after blast ◐ Entrance tickets: $2 for children and $5 for adults ◐ A couple hundred Vancouverites queued for 11 a.m. launch

KIMIYA SHOKOOHI
VANCOUVER@METRONEWS.CA

When a stranger hugged Vancouver Christmas Market organizer Malte Kluetz and gave him a small Slovakian clay pig for good luck, he knew everything was going to be fine.

"I feel great," Kluetz said yesterday as grills were being fired up with bratwurst and glasses filled with mulled wine.

The German-style Christmas market opened yesterday after an explosion scuttled the scheduled launch four days earlier. The blast occurred after a contractor accidentally drilled into a 100-pound propane tank.

The explosion destroyed one-third of the merchandise in the hut of crystal seller Herwig Sehaub.

"We lost a lot," said Sehaub, who flew to Vancouver from Germany for the market. "I hope I can sell a bit."

The outdoor market — filled with German Christmas apparel shops, various chocolate and Bavarian delicacies — is open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily until Dec. 24.

Kluetz hopes the 700-year-old German tradition will turn into an annual event in Vancouver.

"Once people get in here and experience it," Kluetz said, "it'll just get bigger and bigger."

Man dragged 70 feet by SkyTrain

A former nightclub bouncer is being lauded as a hero for rescuing a rapid transit passenger who was dragged along a train platform by the leg.

Chris Knoblauch, 27, says he was on a SkyTrain platform Thursday night when two men got off a train, arguing. One lunged for the other and missed, falling and getting his leg wedged between the platform and the departing train.

"He got dragged about 70 feet and smashed his head off the pole," Knoblauch said. "I took my jacket off and wrapped my shirt around his leg because it was broken. There was, like, blood gushing out his pant legs and stuff." The man was taken to hospital in serious condition. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winter shelter quickly fills up

High-tolerance shelter does not discriminate based on drug use or behaviour ◐ Second shelter likely to open within the week

J.J. MCCULLOUGH
VANCOUVER@METRONEWS.CA

As predicted, Vancouver's first emergency winter shelter quickly reached its 40-person capacity this weekend, less than three days after its Thursday opening.

The inconspicuous East Broadway complex, which is managed by Rain City Housing, a non-profit group that aims to offer "low barrier," 24-7 accommodations to members of the city's homeless populace who may have trouble gaining access to other shelters, is the first of four similar facilities scheduled to open by mid-December.

"I'm not surprised, based on the need," said Rain City spokesman Bill Briscall, reacting to the turnout.

"We're a little bit ahead of schedule, but we had everything ready to go, so it's not a problem."

Though the centre may have reached its legal limit, associate director Sean Spear is likewise quick to caution against misconceptions of what a "full" shelter means.

"We're not standing here blocking the door saying, 'no, you can't come in,'" says Spear, noting that even when over capacity, the facility still provides needy individuals with meals, temporary warmth, and assistance in locating alternate shelters in the area.

The City of Vancouver has so far pledged half a million dollars to support the four-shelter initiative, coupled with an additional $1.5 million from the provincial government in Victoria.

Latest leaks show U.S. diplomacy

WikiLeaks releases more than 250,000 U.S. State Department cables in defiance of White House ◐ As many as 2,648 documents refer to Canada

The revelations

Hundreds of thousands of documents leaked yesterday revealed a hidden world of backstage international diplomacy.

- Nuclear fears
  The cables detail U.S., Israeli and Arab world fears of Iran's growing nuclear program and U.S. concerns about Pakistan's atomic arsenal.
- Information gathering
  There are American memos encouraging U.S. diplomats at the United Nations to collect detailed data about the UN secretary general, his team and foreign diplomats.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIKI LEAKS

Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon called a massive leak of U.S. documents "deplorable" yesterday.

The leak "may threaten our national security," Cannon said in a statement.

The criticism came as several news outlets began publishing American diplomatic cables obtained by whistleblower website WikiLeaks. Soon after, the cables were available to the public at wikileaks.org.

The documents touch on everything from the release of Guantanamo Bay prisoners and Iran's military capabilities to Libyan leader Moammar Ghadafi's eccentricities and U.S. efforts to spy on United Nations officials.

A total of 1,948 cables originating from U.S. diplomats in Ottawa and hundreds of others from various consulates appear to be among the leaked materials.

WikiLeaks confirmed late yesterday there would be as many as 2,648 documents that refer to Canada.

The vast majority of these cables are not expected to become public until sometime this week, but the website offered some hints about the broad range of topics they cover: arms control, CBC coverage, energy technology, Haiti, military nuclear applications, provincial affairs and Syria.

One of the few documents released yesterday to mention Canada described a 2009 meeting at which Ben Rowswell, the representative of Canada in Kandahar, joined in asking about the credibility of Afghan elections.

BELOVED COMIC ACTOR NIELSEN DEAD AT 84

Leslie Nielsen, who traded in his dramatic persona for inspired bumbling as a hapless doctor in Airplane! and the accident-prone detective Frank Drebin in The Naked Gun comedies, died yesterday in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He was 84.

The Canadian-born actor died from complications from pneumonia at a hospital near his home at 5:34 p.m., surrounded by his wife, Barbaree, and friends, his agent John S. Kelly said in a statement.

"We are saddened by the passing of beloved actor Leslie Nielsen but who enjoyed a more than 60-year career in motion pictures and television," he said.

Nielsen came to Hollywood in the mid-1950s after performing in 150 live television dramas in New York. He became known as a serious actor, although behind the camera he was a prankster, an aspect not exploited until Airplane!, which became a huge hit. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AN INSTANT HEARTBEAT FOR DOWNTOWN

Urban Compass

PAUL SULLIVAN

If Mayor Gregor Robertson can lift his head from his bizarre obsession for building massive concrete barriers in the middle of city streets (a.k.a. dedicated bike lanes), here's an idea he should consider that will benefit everyone in our fair city, even the forgotten pedestrian.

The idea comes from the lone opposition voice on city council, NPA Coun. Suzanne Anton, but if the mayor is smart, he will climb all over it and claim it as his own. It's that good.

Anton wants to launch public consultation on the creation of "a major public square on Robson Street between the art gallery and the courthouse, permanently closing the site to traffic."

She points out that the site in question has already been closed for more than a year anyway, so we're all used to going around it. Instead of thwarting traffic for a few hardy cyclists, here's a street closure that will benefit everyone, residents and tourists alike, by giving downtown Vancouver an instant heartbeat.

So much ink is spilled on the Downtown Eastside, the homeless, and other obvious victims of the system, we've kind of forgotten about the rest of us. With a little bit of imagination, Robson Square could become the place for all of us.

"With a little bit of imagination, Robson Square could become the place for all of us."

The city desperately needs a people place. During the Olympics, Granville, south of Georgia, leading to Robson Square, became that place. Buskers and street vendors blossomed like March flowers, and people could saunter down the street without fear of being run over by a car or some crazed Critical Mass Hysteria cyclist, all flashing LEDs and saddlebags.

But the buses returned, and now chase the few remaining meanderers off the street like angry rhinos, honking and hissing.

Robson Street itself is the local shopping promenade, but it doesn't really go anywhere. It just peters out at either end, becoming just another road.

Wouldn't it be nice, therefore, to rescue Robson Square from jackhammers and traffic, and give the street a focus? No great city is complete without a city square. London has four of them (Piccadilly, Trafalgar, Leicester, and Covent Garden), four good reasons it's one of the greatest cities in the world.

Robson Square is perfect: A meeting place of some of the city's best architecture, and the sunny steps of the Vancouver Art Gallery are already the local equivalent of Rome's Spanish Steps. Resurrect the skating rink, add a couple more sidewalk cafés — stir and, voila, the downtown has a soul. Finally.

Suzanne Anton, you go, girl!

Symbol of transformation

Worth mentioning

Ultimate choice

ALASTAIR GRANT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sometimes a dress is just a dress. But not in Kate Middleton's case.

Her wedding dress will be the symbol of her transformation from commoner to princess, from Kate to Catherine, and define her image to billions of people as they watch her exchange vows with Prince William next spring.

This dress must be elegant, memorable and perfectly fitted. There are delicate balances to be struck: Modern but traditional; alluring but not too sexy; classy but not overly opulent — more grown up than Princess Diana's famous meringue confection, with its puffy sleeves and 25-foot train.

Whatever the ultimate choice, expectations are sky high. Middleton has natural good looks and a radiant smile — people seem to wish her well, even if she will be able to afford a dream dress that is far beyond most people's reach.

"I'm not sure if she could pull off a Diana dress, but it would be great if she had something that magnificent," said Mary Alders, 32, a secretary who is looking forward to the royal wedding. "Whatever it is, everyone will want it. I can see it as silk, maybe some beading. It definitely will be spectacular." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big banks set to show good health in Q4

- Earnings to increase by up to nine per cent for year
- Less growth for TD and RBC expected

The big news on the Toronto stock market in the days ahead will be fourth-quarter earnings reports from Canada's biggest banks, which are expected to paint a healthier picture of Canada's financial institutions.

Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal, CIBC, TD Canada Trust, Scotiabank and National Bank of Canada are scheduled to report fourth quarter earnings over the next two weeks.

The banks' capital markets divisions — which were a big drag on bank earnings in the prior quarter — are expected to show an improvement in the three months ended Oct. 31.

But the banks' strong domestic foothold in consumer banking provides the foundation for robust earnings growth, said Jonathan Popper, assistant vice-president and senior portfolio manager at MFC Global Investment Management.

"Canada's been in the sweet spot, our real-estate market has been strong, interest rates are low.

"The mortgage numbers are going to look good for all the banks and the loan loss provisions, with consumer confidence going up, not only will that not be a disappointment, but it could be a positive surprise," Popper said.

Going offline to plug people into awareness

Celebrities to support World AIDS Day by signing off Twitter, Facebook
Aiming to raise $1 million

Alicia Keys and Lady Gaga take charity work seriously, and they're going offline to prove it.

Gaga, Justin Timberlake, Usher and other celebrities have joined a new campaign called Digital Life Sacrifice on behalf of Keys' charity, Keep a Child Alive. The entertainers plan to sign off of social media platforms like Facebook and Twitter on Wednesday, which is World AIDS Day. The participants will sign back on when the charity raises $1 million.

"It's really important and super-cool to use mediums that we naturally are on," Keys said in a phone interview from New York last week.

For the campaign — which also includes Jennifer Hudson, Ryan Seacrest, Kim and Khloe Kardashian, Elijah Wood, Serena Williams, Janelle Monae and Keys' husband, Swizz Beatz — celebrities have filmed last tweet and testament videos and will appear in ads showing them lying in coffins to represent what the campaign calls their digital deaths.

"It's so important to shock you to the point of waking up," Keys said.

The foundation, which began in 2003, will accept donations through text messages and bar-code technology, which is featured in the charity's Buy Life campaign. Raised efforts support families affected by HIV/AIDS in Africa and India.

"We're trying to sort of make the remark: Why do we care so much about the death of one celebrity as opposed to millions and millions of people dying in the place that we're all from?" said Leigh Blake, the president and co-founder of Keep a Child Alive.

When she began recruiting others, not one person said no, Keys recalled.

"I have a feeling that Gaga is going to raise it all by herself," Blake said. Lady Gaga has more than 7.2 million followers on Twitter, and nearly 24 million fans on Facebook.

"She's got a very, very mobilized fan base and that's beautiful to watch I think (and) she's able to draw their attention to these issues that are very important, you know, and that people follow it and act."

A U.S. Border Patrol spokesman says country singer Willie Nelson was charged with marijuana possession after six ounces was found aboard his tour bus in Texas. Fefe finds her voice

In the seven years since Fefe Dobson last released an album, she's largely swapped her punky style and snarl for a more mature look and radio-ready pop polish.

And she doesn't feel like she has to apologize for the change, drastic though it may seem.

"I started writing my first record when I was 17, I'm 25 now," Dobson said in an interview at a downtown Toronto pool hall this week. "If I was the same person as I was when I was 17, there'd be a problem. There'd be a really big problem.

"I'd still be wearing — well, I don't know what I was wearing then. And some of that stuff wasn't good, that's all I can say."

The past seven years weren't all necessarily good for Dobson, either.

Two early singles failed to chart and the record never came out. In 2006, she was dropped from her label, Island/Def Jam, and she had to start again as an indie artist.

Dobson is actually now back with the same label that dropped her four years ago. But she says she's found her voice over the past few years, adding, "I stopped trying to be like other people."

Raising children in the limelight's glare

For celebs, bringing up kids can be daunting ▶ Their kids' clothes and hairstyles face constant tabloid scrutiny ▶ But Hollywood moms like Katherine Heigl say the 'overwhelming love' for a child is the only thing that matters

NED EHRBAR
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Being a parent is tough enough, but the glare of the limelight can complicate things, with the paparazzi, the pre-school politics and the increased risk of screwing up your kids.

"It's one of those things I think that you just have to dive in blindly," says Katherine Heigl, who recently adopted a baby girl from China with husband Josh Kelley.

"It's that overwhelming love that makes us want to procreate. No one would do it otherwise as it is just so intense."

Perhaps the single most famous Hollywood mom, Angelina Jolie, has been learning firsthand how hard the celebrity spotlight can be on children: Her daughter, Shiloh, has become a subject of tabloid attention herself at just four years old thanks to her unconventional hairstyle and boyish clothing choices.

"She likes to dress like a boy. She wants to be a boy," Jolie told Vanity Fair. "So we had to cut her hair. She likes to wear boys' everything. She thinks she's one of the brothers."

But should what a toddler wears be fodder for magazine covers just because she's the daughter of famous actors?

Since Hollywood can be a pretty strange place to begin with, a lot of celebrity parents do their best to make things as normal as possible for their kids.

"I still take my kid to school every day and put him to bed every night," says super-busy producer and director JJ Abrams. "I don't work on weekends."

Showbiz: The next generation

Long before Macaulay Culkin smacked the aftershave on his cheeks in Home Alone, kids have been stealing the show in Hollywood. And while childhood stardom can often lead to less-than-savoury adult lives, some have managed to be successful on both sides of their 18th birthday — Elijah Wood and Jodie Foster come to mind, among others.

Metro takes a look at some promising youngsters who look like they can avoid the True Hollywood Story treatment. NED EHRBAR

Chloe Moretz

After slicing apart bad guys in Kick-Ass and sinking her teeth into unsuspecting adults as a vampire in Let Me In, 13-year-old Chloe Moretz might be a little intimidating to some people. But the refreshingly down-to-earth actress insists there's nothing to be scared of. "I'm just a normal 13-year-old girl," she says. And while some might worry about Moretz taking on such gruesome material, she's very good at discerning reality from fantasy. "It was all acting. It was making up a character that I'm not," she says of her work in the bloody Let Me In.

GETTY IMAGES

Jaden and Willow Smith

When your parents are megastars Will Smith and Jada Pinkett Smith, it likely doesn't take much to get used to the spotlight. After stealing scenes from his dad in The Pursuit of Happyness, 12-year-old Jaden became a movie star in his own right this summer with his The Karate Kid remake, co-starring Jackie Chan.

But before he could enjoy the attention, nine-year-old sister Willow came along to steal it with her surprise hit single Whip My Hair. Imagine what they'll do when they hit puberty.

GETTY IMAGES

Callan McAuliffe

At 15 years old, Australian Callan McAuliffe is already breaking hearts after starring in Rob Reiner's Flipped this summer as one half of a 1960s teen romance.

And his profile is about to skyrocket with his next role in the hotly anticipated I Am Number Four, based on the teen sci-fi novel.

But just because lots of people have been seeing his work, that doesn't mean McAuliffe has as well. "I hate watching myself, as do a lot of actors," he says.

GETTY IMAGES

Kodi Smit-McPhee

Like his Let Me In co-star Moretz, 14-year-old Kodi Smit-McPhee has been dealing with some hefty adult themes. He first won acclaim as the Boy in last year's adaptation of Cormac McCarthy's bleak The Road before romancing a vampire this year.

Luckily, he's had concerned adults around to help shield him from some of the mature subject matter. "We always remained protective of Kodi as a crew," says The Road director John Hillcoat. "There was a lot of black humour; you can imagine the jokes about cannibalism."

Eggs for dinner, with style

Brie and sourdough bread give 'egg on toast' a new sophistication

There are those nights when breakfast is the only way dinner is going to get on the table.

But that doesn't doom you to a bowl of cold cereal in front of the television. There are plenty of easy ways to add a dinner-like sophistication — or at least satisfaction — to your breakfast staples. And that was the inspiration for this rich and cheesy take on eggs and toast.

I started with a thick slab of sourdough pan-toasted in butter. If you insist, you could cut the fat by using olive oil cooking spray in the pan instead. Then I added an egg to the pan and a slab of brie to the bread. When the egg was cooked, but the yolk was still a bit runny, I placed it on top of the brie.

And I called it dinner. And it was scrumptious in an almost disturbingly good way.

Ingredients:

- Start to finish: 10 minutes
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) butter
- 1 thick slice sourdough bread
- 1 egg
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- 1 thick slab brie (about 60 g/2 oz)
- 1 sprig fresh thyme

It got me thinking that this same dish could be recast as a finger food for holiday parties, too. For that, I would roll out a bag of pizza dough as thinly as possible, brush it with some olive oil or melted butter, then pop it in the oven. When it was nearly cooked, pull it out, top it with brie and crack a few eggs on it, then return it to the oven until the eggs are ready.

Toasty Brie and Egg

Preparation:

1. In a large skillet over medium-high, melt butter.
2. Place bread in skillet and toast until bottom is crispy and just turning golden, 3 to 4 minutes. Flip bread to toast other side, pushing it to one side of the pan. Crack egg into other side of pan. Season it with salt and pepper.
3. About 1 minute before egg is cooked to desired doneness, place brie on bread. Use a spatula to transfer egg, sunny side up, onto brie. Cover skillet and cook for another minute. Garnish with thyme and serve immediately. Makes 1 serving.

Meet our new water creatures

- Researchers comb through oceans to find thousands of new animals
- Discoveries range from 'furry' crabs to 'bone-eating' marine worms

ELISABETH BRAW
LIFE@METRO.CA

Ten years ago, 95 per cent of Earth's oceans remained unexplored. Now, experts are unveiling an unprecedented inventory of ocean life.

First, meet the Yeti Crab. It has hairy claws and reproduces its own bacteria, and is one of over 5,300 new species discovered by the Census of Marine Life. Some 2,000 researchers from 80 countries set out to document every species in our oceans.

"We knew that there were unknown species in the oceans, but we didn't know if it was one, 10 or 100 million species," says Dr. David Billett from Britain's National Oceanography Center.

"Off the British coasts, only an estimated 10 per cent of species are unknown. But off the coasts of countries like Angola, the figure is 90 per cent."

Experts found almost 200 new crabs, shrimps and prawns. "Rainforests have a reputation for biodiversity, but most of the species are insects," explains Prof. Paul Tyler, a marine scientist from Southampton University. "By contrast, there's an extremely wide range of animals in the ocean."

Billett discovered new sea cucumbers, a common marine animal in the Indian ocean. "The deep waters aren't dull places where nothing happens."

The most charming discovery may be the osedax, discovered by the Monterey Bay Aquarium Research Institute in California. This seabed creature looks like a wig with pink twigs sprouting out. But the osedax's diet proves to be less enchanting: it feeds on whale bones.

Question: I had a look at the list of 12 ingredients the David Suzuki Foundation suggests I avoid in my cosmetics. Now that I've found toxic ingredients like fragrance and parabens in almost everything, I'm not sure how to dispose of the products I no longer want. I don't want to pour them down the drain, so should I take them to the dump?

Lisa of Toronto

Identifying the "Dirty Dozen" ingredients to avoid in your cosmetics and personal-care products is a huge first step in going green.

Now that you've done your homework — reading the fine-print ingredient lists with their numerous complex chemical names — it's natural to want to turf everything overnight.

And you're not alone. Almost 80 per cent of products reported in our spring survey contained at least one of the "Dirty Dozen" ingredients. They are that widespread.

When it comes to disposal, you were right to question how to dispose of them.

One option is to consider finishing up what you have and then buying a safer alternative without harmful ingredients next time.

If you'd rather stop using your products today, find out if your city considers personal-care products to be household hazardous waste. The City of Toronto's website, at toronto.ca/garbage, has some helpful information about disposing of unwanted household hazardous waste.

No matter where you live, check out your city's website for more tips on disposal.

A final option is to take a stand and mail your product back to the manufacturer.

Include a note explaining your reason, and then ask them to sign the Compact for Safe Cosmetics.

A JOURNEY OF A THOUSAND MILES

TurningPoint

TERESA KRUZE
TURNINGPOINTMEDIA.CA

"A journey of a thousand miles must begin with a single step."

The famous Chinese philosopher, Lao Tzu has inspired many travelers but for Darren Weir his journey began as a young boy growing up in Edmonton when he dreamed about traveling around the world.

His turning point came when a 23-year relationship came to an end.

He took stock of his life and said, "I've got some money, my health, I'm single and turning fifty. If I don't do it now, when will I?"

Weir expects the two year trip will cost him $30,000 to $40,000, and his goal is to pack in as much adventure as possible.

He'll be taking a plane ride through the Himalayas, gliding down the Nile in a wooden boat, learning to dive in the Red Sea, taking in the Surin Elephant roundup, climbing Mt. Fuji and running the Great Wall Marathon in Beijing.

The last few months have been filled with a flurry of planning, inoculations, obtaining visas and plane tickets.

He admits to only one tough moment and that was quitting his television production job at CP24 in Toronto. Panic washed over him as he thought, "what have I done, am I crazy?"

But his confidence returned quickly and now Darren is just days away from embarking on a trip of a lifetime.

When he returns to Canada two years from now he wants to be able to say, "I did it. I lived my dream."

His two year odyssey begins on Wednesday, Dec. 1. Bon voyage my friend and travel safely.

Texting students, irritated profs

Smartphones in class drive teachers – and students – to distraction

When his professors drone, Dan Kautz whips out his phone.

Kautz, a senior at Wilkes University in Pennsylvania, might send a text message to someone across the room — "I can't wait to get out of here" — or make plans with his roommates. He's become so adept at texting during class that he can tap out a message without even looking at the screen, making it appear as if he's paying attention to the instructor when he's really chatting with his girlfriend.

"Every single person I know texts in class at least occasionally," said Kautz, a communications studies major from Pelham, N.Y.

It's no surprise that high school and college students are obsessive texters. What alarms Wilkes psychology professors Deborah Tindell and Robert Bohlander is how rampant the practice has become during class: Their recent study shows that texting at the school has surpassed doodling, daydreaming and note-passing to become the top classroom distraction.

The phenomenon is part of a broader revolution in the way young adults communicate. Most prefer texting to email and certainly to talking on the phone, Tindell said.

Indeed, most view texting as their right.

Almost all the students surveyed by Tindell and Bohlander said they should be allowed to have their phones in class. And a clear majority — 62 per cent — said they should be allowed to text in class as long as they're not disturbing those around them. About one in four said texting creates a distraction.

Tindell instituted a no-texting policy as a result of the study, which has been presented at a pair of academic conferences. She tells students that if she even sees a cellphone during a test, its owner gets an automatic zero.

One Syracuse University professor has taken an even harsher stand.

Laurence Thomas, a popular philosophy professor whose courses have waiting lists, walked out on his class of nearly 400 students last week when he caught a couple of students fiddling with their phones instead of paying attention to him.

It wasn't the first time Thomas has cut a class short because a student broke his no-texting rule. To Thomas, texting saps the class of its intellectual energy.

Everybody does it

The anonymous survey of 269 Wilkes students found that nine in 10 admit to sending text messages during class — and nearly half say it's easy to do so undetected. Even more troubling, 10 per cent say that they have sent or received texts during exams, and that three per cent admit to using their phones to cheat.

Russell Peters' degree

The comedian gets an honourary degree for his observations on race, class and culture He admits school wasn't important for him

CAROLYN MORRIS
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

VINCE TALOTTA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICES

▶Russell Peters, centre, receives an Honourary Degree from the Humber College Institute of Technology and Advanced Learning in Toronto.

School was never a strong point for Toronto's claim to comedic fame — the irreverent Russell Peters.

Yet, the multimillion-dollar grossing comic, whose brazen critiques of ethnicity and class captivate international audiences, finally got a degree. Well OK, it's an honourary one. He didn't have to take any tests to get it, but still.

The School of Creative and Performing Arts at the Humber College Institute of Technology and Advanced Learning located in Toronto recently presented him with an honourary degree for his keen observations on race, class and culture, and for his support of young talent.

This year, Peters launched a $20,000 scholarship for a student from his former high school, Judith Nyman Secondary School in Brampton, Ont., which focuses on technical skills and trades. Metro caught up with Peters by email and asked him for his thoughts on the award, the importance of education, and his advice for aspiring performing artists.

What did you think when you heard the Humber School of Creative and Performing Arts was giving you an honourary degree?
I thought, "Wow, that's pretty cool!" But at the same time it's kind of ironic considering I didn't go to college and just squeaked through high school.

When you were in school, what did you think you'd be when you grew up?
When I was 14, I wanted to be a breakdancer. That was it, just a breakdancer.

What was the most important lesson you learned in school?
That the cool people in school aren't the cool people when you're finished school. The cool crowd becomes the "tool" crowd.

Had your parents chosen a career path for you?
No, they didn't lay anything out for me. We were very working class, so my parents just wanted me to get a steady job, like a union job or something where there was security.

What did they think of you not going to college? About becoming a comic instead?
They were fine with me not going to college — there was no pressure. They didn't really understand what becoming a comic meant. I might as well have said that I was going to be an astronaut. They were like, "That's nice, son..."

You didn't need higher education to be successful and have a rewarding career, yet you recently developed a scholarship for a high-achieving student planning to go to college. Why do you think education is so important?
For me it wasn't important. I felt like the system wasn't really made for kids like me — I had ADD and needed extra help, but the teachers were more focused on the kids who were "getting it," instead of the kids who weren't. That all changed when I switched schools and went to North Peel Secondary (since renamed Judith Nyman Secondary School). That was the first time I felt like I fit in and that the teachers took the time to pay attention to kids like me.

What is your advice to aspiring performing arts graduates?
Don't do it because you just want to "make it big."

If you're going to do it for the money, forget about it. Being a comic or an artist of any kind, you have to do it because you have to.

It's a calling.

Alouettes capture Grey Cup

▶ Montreal Alouettes kicker Damon Duval, right, is congratulated by teammate Ben Cahoon after kicking a field goal during the fourth quarter last night.

Avon Cobourne shut the door on the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Cobourne ran for two touchdowns, including a key two-yard scamper, to power the Montreal Alouettes to a compelling 21-18 win over Saskatchewan in the 98th Grey Cup yesterday.

Cobourne helped Montreal to a second straight Grey Cup win over Saskatchewan following last year's stunning victory. In the 2009 final, Damon Duval missed from 43 yards out on the final play, only to get a second chance after the Riders were called for too many men on the field.

Duval then hit from 33 yards out to give Montreal the 28-27 win.

Montreal earned its third Grey Cup win in eight appearances since 2000.

Despite several trips to the final and two straight titles, Alouettes coach Marc Trestman wasn't about to call his team a dynasty.

"We decided early on we weren't going to be the defending champions nor would be in a position to repeat as a team," Trestman said. "The guys bought into it, they truly believed that they had to earn it on their own merit. We went up against the best that the league had for us and were able to find our way through adversity much of the time."

ALOUETTES	RIDERS

Montreal receiver Jamel Richardson, who caught eight passes for 109 yards, was named the game MVP while Saskatchewan defensive lineman Keith Shologan was the top Canadian.

Richardson, who put up over 100 yards for the third straight Grey Cup, was the first receiver to win the MVP award since Edmonton's Jason Tucker in 2003.

"It's not about me, it's about those guys in the locker-room," Richardson said.

"I didn't do it for me, I did it for them. That's all that mattered going into the game, doing it for the next person. That was our thing going into this game."

With Commonwealth Stadium again a sea of Roughriders green, the Riders stayed in the game due to a Duval miss. With Montreal up 21-18, Duval couldn't connect from 41 yards out.

Saskatchewan returned the ball to its own 16-yard line with roughly 90 seconds remaining, giving the sellout gathering of 63,317, a Edmonton Grey Cup record, a wild finish.

Saskatchewan pulled to within 21-18 on Darian Durant's one-yard TD pass to Marc Parenteau at 11:52 of the fourth. It was set up by a 31-yard reception by Andy Fantuz to put the Riders on the Alouettes' one-yard line.

Montreal countered by driving to the Saskatchewan 33-yard line, only to have Duval miss and give the Riders another chance. But there would be no comeback victory as Billy Parker intercepted Durant's desperate toss at the Saskatchewan 37-yard line with under 56 seconds remaining.

It was the only turnover of the game.

"He didn't want to take a sack in that situation and we really didn't want him to take a sack in that situation," Roughriders coach Ken Miller said. "They got the interception and it was a tough play in that situation."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Governor General David Johnston were among those in attendance. Harper paid a visit to the Alouettes' locker-room after the game to congratulate the champions.

Calvillo says he has lesion in throat

Grey Cup winning quarterback Anthony Calvillo says he will undergo surgery in the next few weeks to have a lesion in his throat removed.

Calvillo says doctors found the lesion after he was hurt in a game against Winnipeg earlier this year.

He says they told him biopsy results on whether it was cancerous were inconclusive, but they told him he could finish out the year.

He says the surgery will see half of his thyroid gland removed.

If the tests come back as being benign, Calvillo says he could be ready to play football next year.

Bryant can't be iced

Falcons best Packers in defensive struggle between playoff contenders

Matt Bryant kicked it right between the uprights, then he did it all over again.

The second one counted, giving the NFC-leading Atlanta Falcons a 20-17 win over the Green Bay Packers.

Bryant's second-chance 47-yard field goal — the Packers called timeout just before he made the first attempt — with nine seconds remaining capped a bruising defensive struggle, pushing Atlanta (9-2) to its fifth straight win. It assures a third straight winning season for a franchise that never had two in a row before this run.

The Falcons have higher aspirations with five weeks to go.

Aaron Rodgers guided Green Bay (7-4) on a drive to tie the game with 56 seconds remaining. Eric Weems broke loose on the kickoff return and was dragged down with a flagrant facemask tackle. Matt Ryan completed four straight short passes and Bryant made the winning kick. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

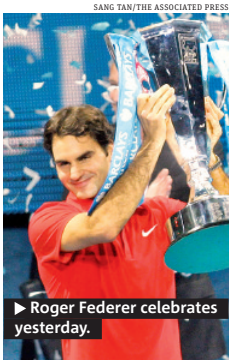
Nadal falls to Federer

SANG TAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



▶ Roger Federer celebrates yesterday.

Roger Federer gave Rafael Nadal little chance to mount a challenge in the 22nd meeting between two of the greatest players of all time, winning his fifth season-ending title 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 at the ATP World Tour Finals yesterday.

Federer won an incredible 92 per cent of the points played on his first serve, and lost only 13 points on serve in the entire match.

Nadal, the top-ranked Spaniard, was able to break Federer once in the second set, but he appeared to tire as the match wore on. On Saturday, Nadal spent more than three hours and three sets beating Andy Murray to reach the final of the tournament for the first time in his career.

"I know I didn't spoil his vacation after this because he's had an amazing year," Federer said. "A year that any player dreams of."

In the doubles final, Canadian Daniel Nestor and Nenad Zimonjic closed out their 3½-year partnership with a 7-6 (8-6), 6-4 win over Mahesh Bhupathi and Max Mirnyi.

The 38-year-old Toronto native has played regularly with the Serb since mid-2007, winning 21 events together. They announced their split in October.

The win cut Nadal's career record to 14-8 against the Federer. In Grand Slam finals, Nadal is 5-2 against Federer, but has now lost all three times they have faced each other in the final tournament of the season. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadian sliders off to solid silver start

Canada claimed a silver medal in the team event yesterday at the season-opening luge World Cup.

Alex Gough, fellow Calgarian Sam Edney and the 19-year-old doubles teammates Tristan Walker of Cochrane, Alta., and Justin Snith of Calgary posted a combined time of two minutes 10.340 seconds.

The German team of Tatjana Huefner, Andi Langenhan and doubles pair Tobias Wendl and Tobias Arlt won all three heats for a total time of 2:09.519. Italy finished just behind Canada for third at 2:10.431.

"This is really great for our team," said Gough. "This event has become more important because now it is recognized as a World Cup event so it is lots of fun for us to race.

"Canada has generally had three consistent sliders in each discipline, which is the difference between finishing on or off the podium in the relay."

The team competition consists of a female sled, a male sled and a doubles sled each completing one run for a combined final time. The athletes hit a pad at the finish to open the start gate for the next slider. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to play@metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You'll do anything to escape a situation you find restrictive in the extreme. But in fleeing one prison, you may find yourself trapped by another. Bide your time.

♉ Taurus April 21-May You sometimes find it hard to share information, even when you know that you should. Today, be open with everyone you meet, especially if there is money at stake. Honesty is by far the best policy.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Be warned: If you try to force your will on other people today your strategy will backfire. It could also be you who ends up being moved around like a pawn or a puppet on a string.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 When dreaming, make sure you have at least some chance of reaching the goals you set. Some things are simply beyond your powers to manifest at the moment, so don't get carried away.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 No matter how hard you try, you can't seem to get through to certain people. It's as if there is a wall that cannot be moved. Perhaps you should take the hint and stop trying so hard.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You may be tempted to move things along at a faster pace today but is that such a good idea? Speed does not necessarily equate with success. Control your impatience.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Setbacks and delays are to be expected over the next 24 hours, and people's nerves are sure to be frayed. Don't add to a negative situation by losing your cool as well.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Don't let your guard down today because there are people out there who are waiting for a chance to take advantage of you, emotionally as well as financially. Stay alert to what is going on around you.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Today it will be difficult for you to get motivated – either that or you will try too hard and act too quickly and make a costly mistake.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 You are looking forward to starting something new, but you are fearful that you will get it wrong and look silly. Don't worry: it will be a huge success — with huge rewards.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Make the best possible job of what you are asked to do today, even if it is something you have never attempted before. Act as if there is not the slightest doubt that you will be brilliant.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Has someone in a position of power got it in for you? Maybe, but even if they have there is no reason why you should be worried.
